How to read this report

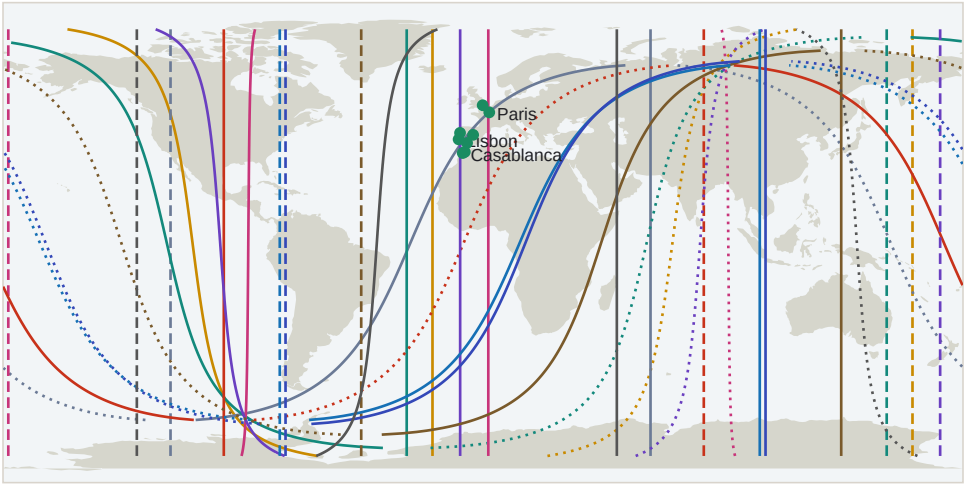

At the moment Maya (sample) was born, every planet was rising somewhere on Earth, setting somewhere else, overhead along one line of longitude and underfoot along the opposite one. Those four places for each of the ten planets make the 40 lines on your map. Astrocartography reads living or travelling near a line as turning up that planet's themes.

Line	Planet was	Affects
MC	Overhead (Midheaven)	Career, reputation
IC	Underfoot	Home, family, roots
ASC	Rising in the east	Energy, how you come across
DSC	Setting in the west	Partners, close relationships

A line is strongest within a few hundred kilometres: its influence is full on the line, about half at 590 km and gone beyond 1,200 km. Every city in this report is scored on four life areas from 0 to 100, where 50 means no strong line nearby, above 65 is supportive and below 40 is demanding.

Birth time matters: 4 minutes of clock time moves every line about 1 degree, roughly 111 km. If the recorded time could be 15 minutes off, read the rankings as neighbourhoods rather than exact points.

Method, sources and limits

Planet positions are the true apparent right ascension and declination for the moment of birth, from the open-source astronomy-engine library, combined with Greenwich apparent sidereal time. MC and IC lines are where a planet was on the meridian; ASC and DSC lines are where it was exactly on the horizon. On three public test births every point of every line puts the planet within 1 degree of the horizon or meridian.

Each planet-and-angle pair has a fixed weight for career, love, home and travel (for example Jupiter MC is strongly positive for career, Saturn IC is negative for home). A city's score is 50 plus the distance-weighted sum of nearby lines, squashed into 0-100. Relocated charts use Placidus houses (Porphyry above the polar circles).
